Job Description:	The Canadian Health Adaptation, Innovations &amp; Mobilization (CHAIM) Centre is a health research Centre at Carleton University. The Centre is a hub for faculty members and researchers from various disciplines to share research results, collaborate and facilitate discussions among diverse populations (professional, students, and lay people alike). In January 2021, the CHAIM Centre will be launching the fourth annual One Health Challenge in a fully online format. One Health entails an awareness of the intricate and complex relationships among the many elements that influence human mental and physical health, including human factors, environmental determinants, and interactions with animals. This year's One Health Challenge (OHC) will focus on building cross-generational connections to promote mental wellness among older adults and youth. Over a six-week competition, teams of 4-6 undergraduate students from various disciplines will collaborate to design an intervention that brings together the generations of younger and older adults in a manner that is mutually beneficial and sustainable, and is appropriate under the restrictions that exist to minimize the spread of viruses, such as COVID-19. Teams will create a 5-10 minute video pitch of their solution and respond to questions from a panel of experts in the field, who will judge and rank each solution at a final closing online event. For more information, please see link for last year's challenge: https://carleton.ca/chaimcentre/one-health/2019-one-h-e-a-l-t-h-student-challenge-2/ Mentor Role: The role of graduate mentors is to guide students throughout the competition. Mentors are expected to familiarize themselves with the

	available resources to help students, attend the opening (January 30th, 2021) and closing (March 20th, 2021) sessions (via Zoom), and attend their team's online group meetings. The role will involve acting as a sounding board for ideas and/or a mediator when necessary as well as offering resources to students and communicating any questions to the organizing committee of the competition, whether logistic or otherwise. Mentors are to ensure that students are progressing and motivated throughout the six weeks and are well prepared for presentation day. However, it is highly important that mentors are only there to provide student support, allowing the undergraduate students to complete the deliverables themselves.
Qualifications:	Applicants must be currently registered as graduate students at Carleton University.
