

Outcomes

The meetings provided a safe and empowering space to share stories allowing the team members to form strong relationships.

The Nawalakw youth members wanted to share some key lessons they learned through their experiences for their community and future generations:

You Are Not Alone

Many Indigenous youth feel isolated from their identity, disconnected from their language and culture but it's a shared experience.

Focus On Your Unique Strengths

Pursue what you are passionate about as it may open opportunities in your community as a leader.

Be Knowledge Keepers

Preserve and share your culture and language with each other and future generations.

A student produced documentary was created to highlight the Nawalakw youth leaders' experiences giving them a platform to amplify their voices.

CLICK HERE

The participants from Carleton learned of the importance of relationships in working together with First Nations young people.

All participants reported self-growth and greater awareness of their leadership skills.